DOES YOUR TECHNOLOGY GROW WITH YOUR BUSINESS?

Typically, businesses invest in technology only when absolutely necessary, which results in multiple applications, systems, devices, and networks. Mix in the complexity of different vendors, databases, processes and "work arounds", and many businesses find themselves stuck with expensive contracts, dissatisfied users, and archaic business processes.

A typical system will look something like the above, with various applications, written years apart and using different technologies or versions, interspersed with spreadsheets. Users adapt, and develop "work arounds" to get their job done, and no one else knows how to use these processes. The stories we could tell.

Years ago, Rminds was working with a client in this exact situation. 27 databases, ageing infrastructure, "work arounds" galore. We explored a variety of options, and discovered Odoo. This open-source platform is an amalgamation of "best in class" processes, melded together and presented in a seamless platform.

Rminds implemented Odoo to streamline operations, consolidate data, and most importantly, allowed our customer to grow their business while reducing IT costs. We were so impressed with the results, we invested in a formal partnership with Odoo. Today, we're busy implementing this solution across a variety of industries, including insurance, manufacturing, legal, architecture and construction.

New Technology Presents the Opportunity to Discover Revenue and Reduce Costs

At Rminds, we see take a business-centric approach to systems development. Our process reviews the entirety of our clients' business, maps the interactions of each department and group, and builds a system that reduces cost and time.

Simultaneously, we take an entrepreneurial approach to the process, identifying new revenue opportunities for our client.

We've been able to address new markets, new segments of an existing market, and support new product and service offerings.

We've helped clients monetize their data in new ways, and partnered with clients in taking new products to market. We are business people who understand technology.

All of your business processes, in one system

Rminds' proven approach maps the business' needs into a streamlined system.

Odoo is an open-source ERP platform with over 30 modules, covering the gamut of business processes. With over 3.7 million users, it is one of the largest installed software products for enterprise.

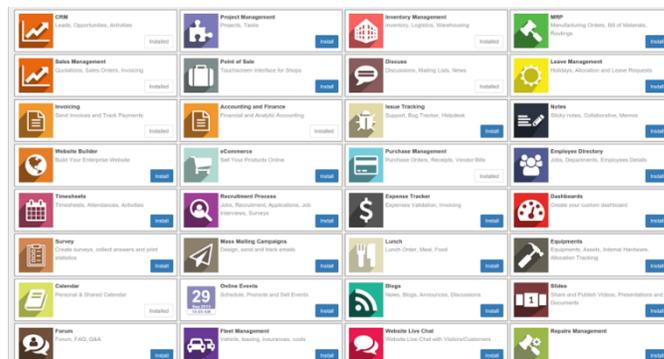

Because we use a highly-configurable platform, Rminds is able to quickly implement the platform to conform to our clients' business processes. Instead of coding, or re-defining processes to meet a pre-built system, we modify configurations of the module. In other words, we do in weeks what has traditionally taken months and years.
